Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Counting the Electoral Votes: Speech The House having under consideration the bill(S. No. 1153)to provide for and regulate the counting of votes for President and Vice-President, and the decision of questions arising thereon, for the term commencing March 4, A.D. 1877 - Mr. Carr said: Mr. Speaker: The subject presented by this bill for our consideration is fraught with an importance which has never been so vividly realized as now. Heretofore in the political history of our country the results of popular elections have been so decidedly and decisively for one or the other of the opposing candidates, that the power of Congress in canvassing the result has been more a matter of form than a necessity, and being such only, the manner and extent of exercising it has been comparatively of minor importance, and therefore the adaptability of the machinery provided by our fathers for this purpose has never been fully tested and its inadequacy discovered. At this time, when the votes of undisputed States leave the opposing candidates for the presidential office so nearly equal and each so close to an election, with a disputed and undisposed of vote yet to be counted sufficient to elect either - under circumstances, where a conflict of State authorities or local claims renders a Federal adjudication of the matter absolutely indispensable, and when that decision shall determine the supremacy, perhaps the future existence, of one of the two great political parties into which the people are divided, we come to examine the constitutional machinery in detail, it is found to be inadequate or imperfectly understood. This is not a new discovery, but one that has long...
