(19 Nov. 1862) plate 13, with which I have compared the theoretical hyperbola. These comparisons have been obtained by calculating the height attained for each inch of depression of the barometer, from the 1st to the 16th, taking for the bottom may therefore be considered as the normal alteration of temperature. In order to secure simultaneous observations at both stations for each section, it would be necessary to have two ascending parties, one for each variable station, each of which should be able to signal to the other. A stationary observer at the lowest station would serve as a check on the other two. This method introduces many practical difficulties, but the reduction of the observations is rendered very easy by Tables I. and II. The great importance of thus calculating heights by sections will be rendered evident by the following examples. Taking the data in the Ann. Metior. de F. for 1852, p. 70, we have for Geneva as the lower and St. Bernard as the upper station, L 46, B 0-72643 A 8-97 Ht 408, V 0-56364. a -1-89 h1 2463. Again, for St. Bernard as...
