SUSAN EDMONSTONE FERRIER. 1782-1854. Odd people--The Ferriers--Birth of Susan at Lady Stairs Close--Talent for mimicry--Visit to Inverary Castle--Marriage--The Inheritance--The Black family--Destiny--Last visit to Abbotsford--Failure of eyesight--Death. DURING the last ninety years, we must all admit that a vast improvement has taken place in the writing of novels. The stilted and artificial language which delighted our forefathers has long ago disappeared. Even ordinary stories are more coherent and better put together than some of the best novels of former days, the descriptions are more graphic and picturesque, and the conversations more easy and natural; and yet those who wrote novels ninety years ago had one immense advantage over us--they had a large mine of materials to draw from, which is now almost exhausted. Odd people, full of strange eccentricities in dress, conversation, and habits, were then constantly to be found, and supplied a stock of...
