How little they who organized this Territory, thought that in one hundred years to a day, near midway of that vast unbroken wilderness, there would be a city of seven hundred and fifty thousand people, and that in it there would be in session, a convention of Teachers numbering several thousands, gathered from a common country whose extent was from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Gulf of Mexico to the Great Lakes. This little Book (telling briefly the story of the marvelous growth of our country during this one hundred years, together with its causes) is respectfully commended to the educators of our nation, whether in the home or school, or pulpit, or editorial chair.
