Did cha ever think about dying? I shifted until I was comfortable again on the small boulder. My back felt stiff and my legs hurt from having run so far that day. I stared down at the seven-year old girl sitting at my feet. Her face was dirty and her long, fine, black hair was naturally matted from having been in the open so long. A comb and other toiletries were not available to us on the run. She stared back, twisting a shred of cloth on the skirt of her torn, sooty dress. Did cha ever? she persisted. Did cha ever think about dying? This story actually came to be years before while I was living in the Philippines. One morning I was in the tiny bathroom trying to get the shower to send out some hot water instead of its usual cold spray when a voice, a little girl's raw whisper sounded in my head. Did cha ever think about dying? Nothing like this had ever happened before. Frightened, I feared everything from potential brain damage to inexplicable approaching madness, but there was no expert medical help available. Finally I decided to forget the bizarre incident, but the voice persisted. In a last-ditch effort to return to some normalcy I wrote the words down. To my surprise the pen, with me holding it, began to skim, over and over, across the paper, resulting finally in this book. This was followed by odd dreams that occurred, off and on, throughout the years until they finally disappeared. Until now. Now the dreams have come again. I think of this story as metaphorical fiction. The tale revolves...
